market recorded a $35 million transaction. Miami followed with a $34 million sale, while San Francisco recorded the fourth-highest publicly marketed sale at $24 million.

The full roundup of the most expensive publicly marketed home sales includes:

- Los Angeles: $35 million
- New York City: $35 million
- Miami: $34 million
- San Francisco: $24 million
- San Diego: $17 million
- Seattle: $15.9 million
- Charlotte: $15 million
- Tampa: $14 million
- Boston: $13.7 million
- Phoenix: $12.9 million
- Las Vegas: $11.8 million
- Washington, D.C.: $6.8 million
- Philadelphia: $6.6 million
- Chicago: $6.4 million
- Denver: $5.5 million
- Atlanta: $5.4 million
- Nashville: $5.3 million
- Minneapolis: $4.1 million
- Cleveland: $2.7 million

The distribution of these top-tier transactions highlights the continued concentration of ultra-luxury sales at the very top end of the market. Los Angeles, New York City, Miami and San Francisco all recorded publicly marketed sales above $20 million, while several additional markets, including San Diego, Seattle, Charlotte, Tampa, Boston, Phoenix and Las Vegas, recorded sales above $10 million.

Based on MLS data found on Homes.com, the analysis captures publicly marketed transactions and does not include private or off-market deals, which are common in the highest tier of the housing market.
